PiCUS is a sonic tomograph machine that measures the speed of sound waves in wood in order to detect decay and cavities in standing trees. The new planting figures would have been higher but extreme winter weather delayed over hectares of planting until later in the year, too late to be included in the reporting period. Liz then gave a very detailed presentation on Somatic Embryogenesis.

In addition to the workshop activity, presentations will be given on choosing

Hyperspectral imagery consists of hundreds of narrow bands across the visible and infrared regions of the electromagnetic spectrum providing a higher level of spectral detail than traditional colour imagery. The day was a good balance of trees and decay with discussions surrounding making informed judgements on conservation while managing appropriate risk. His strong desire to leave behind a lasting legacy was realised through the creation of strong management teams to lead the businesses he nurtured.
