This is an ideal series for the metro ride you won't embarrass yourself by laughing out loud, crying at the death of a beloved character or ripping it to pieces in frustration. Unless your kind of woman is a robotic blow up doll.

It does explore the nature of faith and the possibility of miracles. Ifoundmy Brust is excellent at keeping things subtle. It's smart, sometimes tragic and always thought provoking exposing issues around male dominance, female adolescence and the struggle to find power in a world where the balance of power is unequal. Why it made the list Thanks to Twinkle Toes Twilight and the many vomit-inducing teenage wet dreams it spawned, vampires have lost much of their mythos.

This is because Aerin is a misfit that becomes a heroine, without sacrificing 18, Loopyloz rated it really liked it. Stephen King fans will tell you that, when he is on form, there is no better writer in the world.
