Seventh-grader Serena Shaw is trying to keep up at school while rehearsing for the lead role in the spring musical and dealing with a father so "blue" he is.

Since Serena's mother died in a car crash, it's up to Serena to make sure that her depressed father takes his medication, does the grocery shopping, pays the.

He reads just a bit too perfect and a little too mature for his age. I recommend it for middle school students because some of the scenes with the dad become painfully dire, and would probably not be a good choice for most elementary students, but could be cathartic for some mature readers. Can Serena see them through until her dad feels better or will her dad's blues win? I don't think I'll ever forget this book. Cancel Reply 0 characters used from the allowed.

The portrayal of Serena is strong, showing both her maturity in handling her father and her vulnerability. I read another book where Serena's mother died more than a year ago, but things are still tough, especially with Serena's father still feeling blue. Farrar, Straus and Giroux.
