The suspense and mystery in it was great. Having accidentally read A Heart's Rebellion, Axtell's sequel to this novel, first, I found that most of the mystery surrounding Celine was lost my mistake!

Not cold, hard facts but experiences. Yes, there were a few spots I'd have liked I would have enjoyed a bit more thrill of flirting with danger, though at least their relationship is fairly solidly built, for all that they cannot completely trust each other's loyalties. She is so exacting in her every movement. Lady Celine is the widowed countess from one of France's most historical and aristocratic families exiled to England. Cutoff from time and the jungle below, feared by natives because of "The characters in this novel are hit and miss. To me this felt like a romance novel.
